

Beer and breweries

Myrtle Beach is where everyone stops for hops

The Myrtle Beach area has long been famous for its 60 miles of beautiful, sandy beaches, award-winning seafood and renowned attractions such as The Carolina Opry and the Myrtle Beach SkyWheel. And now, Myrtle Beach is quickly becoming a craft beer mecca along the East Coast.

TOURS, TASTINGS AND TIPS

Here are the top ways to truly experience Myrtle Beach's craft brew scene

Piggly Wiggly at The Market Common

Simply put, this is the best beer selection along the Grand Strand. There's a six-tap growler station and over 600 different craft beers are available year-round.

New South Brewery

Myrtle Beach's own microbrewery began in 1998, brewing fresh ales and lagers for local restaurants. Today, they can their beer to sell in regional grocery stores. Schedule a free tour and tasting to learn more about these local brews.

Bumsteads Pub

A neighborhood bar with the look and feel of a traditional Irish pub, this local favorite has more than 150 imported and domestic beers available. Finish them all in the span of a year, and get your name on their wall.

Gordon Biersch Brewery and Restaurant

A wonderful menu is complimented by the beers brewed in-house. Their hefeweizen and sommer brau are very popular.

The Crafty Rooster

Worth the drive to the heart of downtown Conway. They have 14 taps of craft beer in this Coastal Carolina-themed sports bar. A new craft keg is tapped every Tuesday.

Fire and Smoke Gastropub

Those looking for something beyond the traditional bar have a new place to visit in the Myrtle Beach area. The Fire and Smoke Gastropub offers high-end beers, bourbons and cocktails to patrons. Plus, the chefs smoke cheeses, proteins and can even smoke your beverages!

The Homebrewer's Pantry

Want to give beer-making at home the ol' college try? This new store in Conway offers homebrew ingredients and equipment for making beer, wine, mead, cider and soda. Classes will also be starting soon.

visit
MYRTLE BEACH
SOUTH CAROLINA

VisitMyrtleBeach.com

Or, if wine is more your speed, try one of these local favorites:

La Belle Amie Vineyard

An operating vineyard open to the public year-round, La Belle Amie is a popular attraction for visitors and hosts many festivals and events throughout the year, including weekly live music.

Duplin Winery

Opening in 2015, Duplin Winery's current North Carolina operation is the largest winery in the South, producing 1.4 million gallons of its delicious, award-winning sweet wines.

BEER CELEBRATIONS

Myrtle Beach, or Beer City USA, rolls out the welcome mat year after year for craft beer fans looking to try that new ale, IPA or porter. There is also something for wine aficionados.

Myrtle Beach Beerfest

This annual spring celebration of all things stout, ale and everything in between entered its seventh year in 2015. Held at the House of Blues, the event gives attendees more than 100 craft beers throughout two sessions.

Irish Fest

St. Patrick's Day gets an early start every with the annual Irish Fest at The Market Common. Attendees have a great selection of craft beers to choose from. There is also a wealth of traditional Irish music and a sea of green. The luck of the Irish will definitely be with you!

Wine Fest

Whether you prefer a bottle of red, or a bottle of white, you're sure to enjoy many great samples at the Myrtle Beach Wine Fest, held each October at The Market Common. The event, which is returning for its sixth year in 2015, also features "A Taste of The Market Common."

Brew At The Zoo

Brookgreen Gardens' annual fall craft beer tasting returns every September. It features more than 30 regional and national selections, as well as offering participants the rare opportunity to see many of the exhibits at Brookgreen's Lowcountry Zoo at night. As an added bonus, guests receive a signature tasting glass.

Oktoberfest

For the first weekend in October, The Market Common recognizes all the wonderful heritage, food and beer of Germany. The local Oktoberfest celebrates its eighth year in 2015 and offers attendees a large selection of fine German beers to enjoy, plenty of food, a pumpkin patch for the kids and so much more.

Craftyfest in Conway

In early November, Conway's popular Crafty Rooster celebrates its great assortment of craft beers right in the heart of historic downtown Conway, along the Waccamaw River. Attendees can sample dozens of choice brews and enjoy a fine stroll along the Conway Riverwalk.