

2017 SPRING TRAINING GUIDE

CACTUS LEAGUE FUN IN THE SUN

FOR BASEBALL FANS, it's like a dream come true. Imagine a place where, every day for a whole month at 1:00 in the afternoon, you can choose between as many as eight to 10 Major League Baseball games being played by 15 teams in 10 of the most intimate ballparks in the country. This dreamlike scenario unfolds every spring in Scottsdale and the Valley of the Sun metro region, beginning in mid-February when pitchers and catchers report to their respective teams' spring training camps, and runs through the end of March with more than 200 games on the Cactus League schedule. So, get ready to live the dream and let this guide show you how!

CACTUS LEAGUE HISTORY

Scottsdale's longtime home team, the San Francisco Giants, has called Scottsdale Stadium its spring home since 1984, but the squad has roots in the desert dating back to 1947, making it one of the Cactus League's two founding franchises.

HISTORY

The New York Giants' then-owner Horace Stoneham was inspired to move his team's spring training operation from St. Petersburg, FL to Phoenix in 1947 after a serendipitous dip in the Buckhorn Mineral Baths in nearby Mesa. He found the natural baths' therapeutic properties and the warm desert climate quite conducive to spring training preparation, and the Giants began playing home exhibition games at the original Phoenix Municipal Stadium at the corner of Central and Mohave near the current Chase Field in downtown Phoenix. Stoneham found a willing spring training partner in Cleveland Indians' owner Bill Veeck, who agreed to move his team's spring operation from Clearwater, FL to Tucson that same year.

The Chicago Cubs became the third team to officially conduct spring training in Arizona at Mesa's Rendezvous Park in 1952. When the Baltimore Orioles landed in Yuma in 1954, Arizona's spring circuit was officially dubbed the "Cactus League." The same Orioles would become the first team to play at the original Scottsdale Stadium in 1956.

Scottsdale Stadium was an immediate success and provided a historical cornerstone for the Cactus League. The timing couldn't have been better as Major League Baseball was beginning its westward expansion with the New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers moving to San Francisco and Los Angeles, respectively, in 1958. By 2009, the Cactus League had reached its current high-water mark with 15 teams conducting spring training in close proximity to each other across the greater Phoenix metro region.

What began in 1947 with one team in Phoenix and another Tucson has expanded into the west-Valley cities of Peoria, Maryvale, Glendale, Goodyear, as well as Scottsdale, Mesa, Tempe and the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community.

SCOTTSDALE'S HOME TEAMS

Scottsdale is home to three of the Cactus League's heaviest hitters. The three-time World Champion San Francisco Giants take on the competition in the heart of downtown at Scottsdale Stadium. A short drive north, the Colorado Rockies and Arizona Diamondbacks play at Salt River Fields at Talking Stick, located on the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community.

MOVING FORWARD

In 2015, the Oakland A's left Phoenix Municipal Stadium and returned to Hohokam Stadium, a stadium they originally opened in 1977. Hohokam Stadium has served as the home of several spring training teams (including the beloved Cubs), has undergone multiple renovations over the years and had another facelift in 2015. Upgrades include all new seats and seating areas, an HD scoreboard display and more!

CACTUS LEAGUE LEGACY TRAIL

Since the earliest days of spring training baseball in Arizona, downtown Scottsdale has been a sought-after destination for Major League players, coaches, executives, umpires and fans. You can literally walk in the footprints of Hall of Famers like Willie Mays, Ted Williams, Ernie Banks and Dizzy Dean by stopping at some of their favorite Scottsdale hangouts along the Cactus League Legacy Trail. The Legacy Trail is a self-guided tour of various hitching posts and watering holes that share a lengthy association with spring training baseball here in town.

SCOTTSDALE STADIUM

It's hard to believe that the regal red-brick and green-awning Scottsdale Stadium still sits on the same corner where the original wooden bandbox was built in 1955. Originally opened by the Baltimore Orioles in 1956, Scottsdale Stadium has served as the spring training home for more teams than any other Cactus League facility.

HISTORY

Following the Orioles in succession were the Boston Red Sox, Chicago Cubs and Oakland A's before the Giants arrived in 1984.

Scottsdale stadium was remodeled to its current incarnation by the renowned ballpark architectural firm HOK Sport (now Populous) in 1992, bringing Arizona spring training baseball to its modern era and sparking the Cactus League's renaissance. In recent years, additional stadium renovations have included the construction of a full practice field and infield diamond, an expanded home-team clubhouse, the extension of the concourse breezeway to encircle the ballpark, and the creation of the Charro Lodge party deck behind the bullpen in right field.

The Scottsdale Charros, a non-profit civic organization composed of local business leaders, has helped organize and promote spring training in Scottsdale since its founding in 1961. The Charro Lodge is the ultimate VIP experience with patio-style seating, all-inclusive food and drink, and a commemorative game program included in the price of admission. This party deck also boasts a spectacular panoramic view of the ballgame. Other game-day options include traditional stadium bleachers and lawn seating on the plush outfield berm.

OPENING DAY 2017

The 2016 Cactus League season begins at Scottsdale Stadium on Feb. 24 with a classic matchup between the San Francisco Giants and Cincinnati Reds. Cactus League game days create a carnival-type atmosphere for both local and visiting fans strolling through Old Town and Scottsdale Civic Center Park, a lush pedestrian park that houses restaurants, museums and the Scottsdale Center for the Performing Arts.

SPRING TRAINING FESTIVAL

Scottsdale's award winning Spring Training Festival is back for another year. This free, family-friendly event brings together the best of baseball to celebrate the start of Cactus League Spring Training and another season of America's Favorite Pastime. Event highlights include meet and greets with players and former players, batting cages and pitching machines, sports memorabilia, live music, food trucks and more. The event takes place March 4, at the Scottsdale Civic Center Park.

SALT RIVER FIELDS AT TALKING STICK

The Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community borders Scottsdale to the east and is home to one of the newest baseball facilities in the area – Salt River Fields at Talking Stick. Two of Major League Baseball's more recent expansion franchises, the Colorado Rockies (1993) and Arizona Diamondbacks (1998), spent their spring training histories in Tucson before coming to Salt River Fields when it opened in 2011.

HISTORY

The first Major League facility to be built on Native American land, Salt River Fields set an all-time spring training attendance record in its first season and has consistently been in the top three in Cactus League attendance ever since. The facility's name was carefully chosen to represent the culture of the community. "Fields" refers not only to the facility's 12 practice fields but the community's long agricultural history. "Talking Stick" is a historical reference to a traditional Pima calendar stick where significant events and milestones were recorded. And the slogan, "Bringing Baseball Back Home," is a reference to the region's historical ties to ball and stick games and rituals previously practiced in the region. In fact, ball courts created by Arizona's indigenous peoples existed within a few miles of where the Salt River Fields ballpark stands today.

The 11,000-seat stadium was created by HKS and features shaded ramadas, a winding concourse, lush lawn seating, stadium seating and two large party decks. A pair of restaurant bars are located in the right- and left-field corner nooks and the Cold Stone Kids' Fun Field features a whiffle ball field that opens 70 minutes before the first pitch and closes at the end of the seventh-inning-stretch.

OPENING DAY 2017

The Arizona Diamondbacks and Colorado Rockies compete in their Cactus League season opener at Salt River Fields on March 2.

LEGACY TRAIL BRINGS CACTUS LEAGUE HISTORY TO LIFE

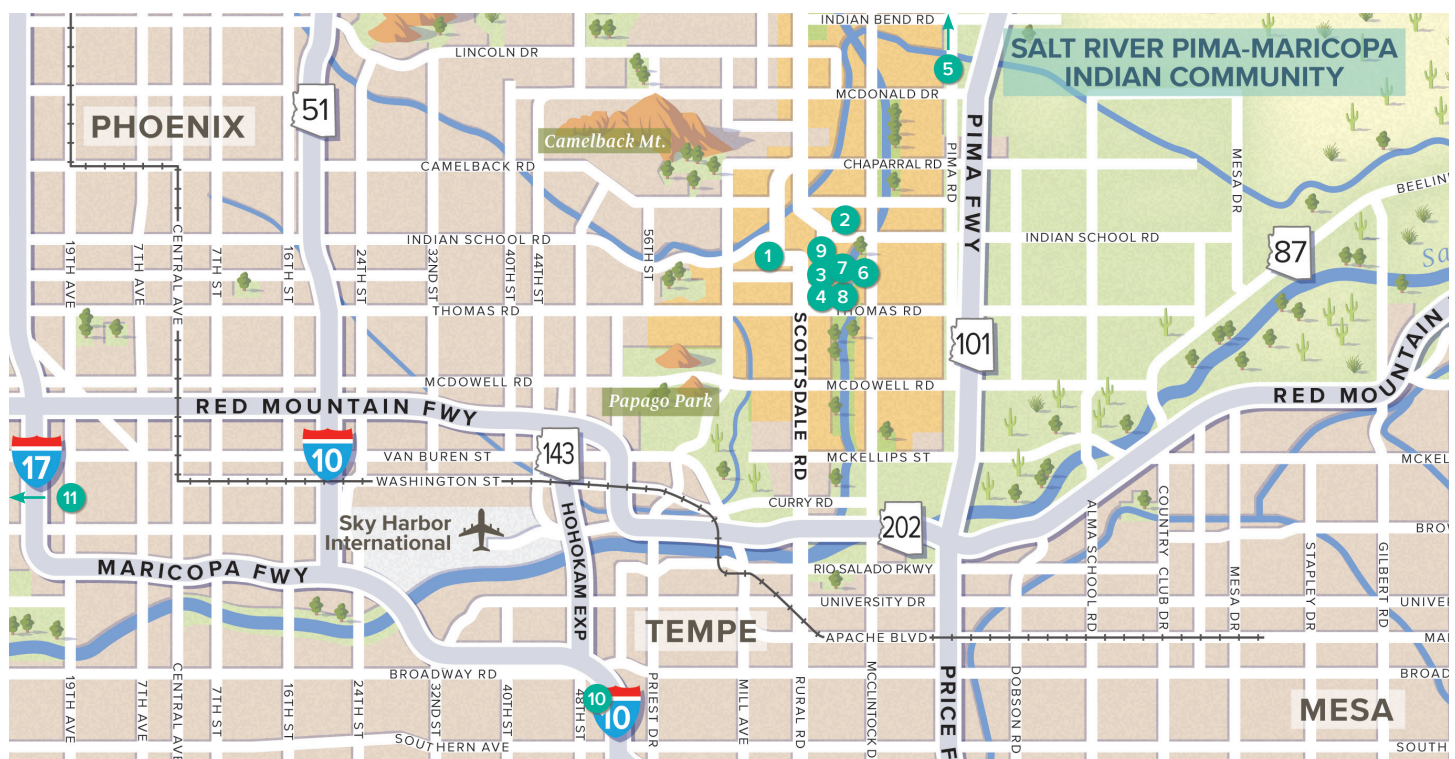

From the Buckhorn Baths to Ernie Banks and Buster Posey, Arizona's Cactus League has a history steeped in sun, fun, phenoms and Hall of Famers.

That colorful past comes to life this spring in a series of exhibits collectively called the Cactus League Legacy Trail. Collections in Scottsdale, Tempe and Goodyear make up the trail, a must-see journey for even casual baseball fans.

Together, these exhibits tell the story of the Cactus League from its barnstorming beginnings to the state-of-the-art complexes of today. They also present the remarkable stories, photos and memorabilia of the ballplayers who, through the years, created "America's Pastime."
